

“Your fingerprints are everywhere.” When it comes to developing new strategies, and implementing ideas for Campus Crusade for Christ, Kim and I have the privilege to play a part in those activities. Last month, I got an email from a friend who mentioned that they regularly hear our stories, but are curious as to what exactly we do.

Kim is a coach to new staff who are in the process of raising personal support for their ministry assignment. We thought it might be best if Joshua, Enid and Eric explained firsthand what Kim does as she helps reach the lost with the gospel.

“My wife (Rose) and I worked on developing our team of ministry partners for one year in order to report to our ministry assignment. Kim’s C o n t i n u a l encouragement to us, week after week, played a huge part in us being willing to trust God and persevere through the ups and downs. She often reminded us of God’s provision for so many other staff members, including Marc and Kim. Additionally, her creative ideas and care for us as a married couple, blessed us richly! We will not soon forget how God used Kim to spur us on in building our team of ministry partners!” We are forever grateful for the part you played in getting us to Orlando.

As a new staff with Campus Crusade for Christ, I get the wonderful privilege of having Kim as my coach. She o f f e r s encouragement as we talk through the week’s assignments and activities. She is a wealth of knowledge, and offers creative ideas, helpful suggestions and prayers.

I love being able to bring my questions and concerns to her.

I am a single (widowed) mother of five children and Kim offers understanding and perspective as I seek to develop my support while balancing my job and the needs of my family. I am grateful Kim walks with me through the process of developing my support. It is nice having Kim coach me through the process of developing my team of ministry partners.

Having you (Kim) as a coach helped me think outside my personal box. During our calls each week, you would approach the same challenge of my MPD with a different idea or solution to try. So having another, more experienced, brain was definitely a benefit!

Secondly, it was good to have someone keeping me accountable. Knowing I would touch base with you every week was extra motivation outside of just wanting to report to my ministry assignment in Orlando. It also gave rhythm to the process of raising support as each Monday marked a “new week”. Also, I don’t think I would have focused on my progress as diligently had I not had a coach.

Thanks for your work as my coach!
